Fishbowl Key Features:

Kitting: Bundle products together and sell them as a single product as Fishbowl deducts inventory from the proper individual counts.

LIFO, FIFO, Standard & Average Costing: Choose between several accounting methods while still integrating with QuickBooks.

Consignment: Manage your inventory assets in external locations. Determine age of stock, what has been used, sold, or gone missing. Easily create purchase orders to replenish specific remote locations.

Substitute Products: Link products with substitute products. Out of stock while filling an order? Fishbowl gives you the option to look at substitute products to replace the product that is not available.

Multiple Locations: With a few clicks, view each location and its entire inventory or search which locations have a specific part.

Reconcile Purchase Orders: Resolve inconsistencies between purchase orders and actual invoices. Receive inventory with or without a bill.

Landed Costs: Keep accurate records of your profits with the ability to properly add shipping costs, taxes, etc., to the overall cost of a part.

RMA/Repair Depot: Easily view the pertinent information that is necessary to quickly and efficiently issue a return to a customer while tracking the original purchase date, serial number, sales date, customer, and more.

Drop Shipping: Maximize your profits by selling/managing products that you do not house—reducing shipping and stocking costs.

User Access Rights: Define the abilities of each user down to specific functions inside each module, enabling users to see only the modules and data that are assigned to him/her.

*Based on the 2008 versions of QuickBooks Pro, Premier and Enterprise Solutions.

“Two years ago, we opted for a $100k+ enterprise solution. After an additional $20k in customization, we jettisoned our investment and reinvestigated the market. After demos of three different inventory management software packages, we actually purchased the least expensive one...Fishbowl Inventory.

Fishbowl Inventory has the most robust and technically sound solution for our needs. We have several locations with thousands of different products. We have found the technical support superb and the training thorough. We paid less than 10% for Fishbowl Inventory than what we paid for our 'nightmare' experience with the other enterprise solution.”
